

SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I, of course, I couldn't say conceivable the way you put the question. Of course, I would say that there's bound to be, I think this is an example of shifting the target. Again, it started out as sentinel. We built up sentiment against that. They shifted to safeguard the sentiment against that. They shifted to another one, and sooner or later, I guess we have to go on to looking after our constituents in some other manner. This is a device the executive has a great advantage in. It could succeed.

- 00:00:37 UNKNOWN From CBS Washington in Color Face the nation, a spontaneous and unrehearsed news interview with the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Senator J William Fulbright of Arkansas. Senator Fulbright will be questioned by CBS News, white House correspondent Dan Rather, syndicated columnist Joseph Kraft and CBS News correspondent George Herman.
- 00:01:02 GEORGE HERMAN Senator Fulbright, I think to get at the question of what, if any compromise might be acceptable to you, I have to know what you were original and basic objection to the anti-ballistic missile system is.
- 00:01:12 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, the, the, I made it very clear right after the day after we passed the non-proliferation Treaty with Article six in it, which calls for negotiations for disarmament, especially with nuclear weapons. I mean, moving in that direction, the president announced safeguard. I really thought as a political matter as well as national interest, he would de defer that and proceed to negotiate possibly some restrictions upon the escalation of nuclear weapons. He didn't choose to do that. I think the, the ABM is a symbol of, of a lack of concern and interest in, in Article six. I think that these people are very cynical about it, and they could be right that there's no hope with these big countries of ever making any really serious change in the rhythm of recurrent warfare. And therefore, they, they, they say, they say these things as Article six with tongue in cheek. So I, it makes me very pessimistic about our overall purposes. The A BM by itself is not all that significant. I wouldn't bother about it if it had no significance with regard to that, and also with regard to the untouchability of the military budget. Uh, one of its greatest significance is already, I think, regardless of what happens to ABM, I think we have breached the, the sanctity that has surrounded the Pentagon since World War II. And I believe there will be questions asked about, its about its budget in many other ways in the coming months. And this I think is very important, perhaps the most important element of the ABM matter.
- 00:02:52 JOSEPH KRAFT Um, Senator Fulbright, that being the case, what are the, uh, large budget items that you're interested in going after? Where do you think you're gonna be cutting deeply?
- 00:02:57 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, the one that has particularly interests me is not so large, but so uh-uh, so inappropriate and I think has much to do with other things. And that is the research program in the behavioral sciences. I think this, and in the academic field, I think this has contributed to the great unrest and turmoil in the academic field, which is one of our greatest problems at the moment, as you all know, uh, that isn't such a big si sum. It's only 45 million, but it's a symbol of the, of the idea that, that we are, are a militarized society, because here they're taking over things that have absolutely nothing to do with Pentagon, with military things. The big, the big items are this, these, these weapons systems. We, you've seen the figures. I hesitate off the cuff to try to be precise about 'em, but there was an article about Rossiter in the post, I think it was, there'd been 23 weapons systems that had been, uh, sort of proposed and examined and gone and certain things done, but it left the impression about $40 billion had gone down the drain for no particular purpose. Just because somebody was, there was so much money, and they're not very, not very prudent or serious about it. If my memory serves me right, we have spent in the United States, in the neighborhood of $1,200 billion on military affairs since World War II, and a great part of that, I'm quite sure, was unnecessary and wasteful. Uh, so it would be, weapon systems would be number one. I think these, these extraordinary things that of which ABM is won.
- 00:04:32 DAN RATHER
- 00:04:32 CBS NEWS

- 00:04:32 DAN RATHER Senator, returning to the ABM, uh, debate at hand, uh, is there any compromise that the White House might strike with which you could agree compromise on the ABM?
- 00:04:42 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, of course. How could I know? I have no idea. There. There may be, but the, the significance of it is, is beyond just the ABM technological aspects. I mean, this is you. They've shifted, I suppose they've already done that once. Uh, they, they, they shifted from Sentinel. There was sentiment growing against Sentinel. Our first hearings in my committee were against Sentinel. Then they come along with Safeguard. And so that's as difference they say. So we have to make the case all over again. Now, they can come with something and the post indicates will be a research pilot project. Well, that sounds little, and for the first year it might be only a few hundred million, which to the Pentagon is very little.
- 00:05:22 JOSEPH KRAFT Well, it's fairly obvious that that's the direction in which they're moving. Well, you say we wanna build two sites and two sites only.
- 00:05:22 UNKNOWN Yeah, I know.
- 00:05:27 JOSEPH KRAFT And those sites are for research and developed.
- 00:05:32 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT You agree with that? I'm against that, if that's what you mean, because I think it is not very serious, and I think it still remains as a symbol of our lack of interest in, in negotiating a de-escalation of the strategic arms race of the nuclear warfare. I would like for the, and I thought the Congress meant, and I meant that when we pass an Proliferation treaty with Article six, that we meant it, that we were going to make a good faith effort to try to reach some political standstill, if you like, on the development of these weapons. Now, if we don't mean it we'll, all right. We might as well know it.
- 00:06:02 UNKNOWN So you could not agree with the research and development of, and building only two sites.
- 00:06:07 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT If you wish to be purely saved to continue research in the field of and ballistic, missiles, I would agree with that, but connected with the background of this and connected with those missile sites in North Dakota. I would question the, the sincerity and the, the, the, well, the, the real, I guess the essential truth of such a proposal. If it's research I have said, and others have said, we don't mind. We, we will support a continued research in, in this field.
- 00:06:37 DAN RATHER Senator, you seem more interested in the, in the symbols of this fight than in, in solving the practical elements of it.
- 00:06:42 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT You mean of the ABM?
- 00:06:42 DAN RATHER Of, well, of the ABM.
- 00:06:47 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I don't think the by itself, standing alone is all that important. It's just another weapon system of which there've been a great many failures. It's no worse than Bomark or what all those names, they, all these fancy names that have been tried and Sky Boat, they always have such fancy, wonderful names like Automobiles, Mavericks, and Mustangs and Sky Bolts. I can't remember the names. I'm not, that isn't very important in itself. It's important as I, well, I've already, I don't wanna repeat it. I'm sorry. I'm not clear.
- 00:07:17 JOSEPH KRAFT
- 00:07:17 COLUMNIST
- 00:07:17 JOSEPH KRAFT Let's talk about some of the other possible elements of a compromise. One suggestion has been that there might be a presidential commission, uh, to, uh, keep abreast of, of different, uh, development.

00:07:27 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Oh, well, I wouldn't call that a compromise. You mean like Killian proposed?

00:07:27 UNKNOWN Mm-Hmm.

00:07:32 UNKNOWN Oh, I'm for that. I, I wouldn't consider that a compromise. That's a, that's abandoning the deployment of the missile. I, that of course, I would agree with. I didn't understand what you meant by compromise.

00:07:47 GEORGE HERMAN

00:07:47 CBS NEWS

00:07:47 GEORGE HERMAN Well, let me, let me extend the, the scope of the inquiry a little bit. So far we've been asking entirely about you, yourself as Senator Fulbright. How about among your colleagues, either on the committee or in the Senate, is there a compromise which could save something for the administration and still pass this through Congress despite your personal objections?

00:08:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I, again, maybe we, I'm, we we're speaking across purposes about what is a compromise. If, well...

00:08:07 GEORGE HERMAN My, my, specifically includes saving some of the ABM for the administration.

00:08:12 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT (inaudible) suggest Mr. Kraft suggests is a compromise. I'm for it. I'm sure my colleagues would be.

00:08:17 UNKNOWN I'm returning to a position where the administration...

00:08:17 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT If you have to examine in detail what do you mean by compromise? And this, this goes on and on. If it's a, if it's merely a shift to the target, it's no more of a compromise than, than, uh, a safeguard is to sentinel.

00:08:32 UNKNOWN That's the kind of compromise on that.

00:08:32 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT If it's a real compromise to a committee or a different approach, I'd say probably yes.

00:08:37 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT But you don't think some tinkering, some fine tuning could get through the sentence?

00:08:42 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I shouldn't. I mean, I, I'm not, I don't think we ought to fool the American people. And I may say I'm certainly not the only one. Senator Gore Symington and a great many people, and the most encouraging thing about this is Mr. Kraft says, I seem to think I say symbols. One of the encouraging things is, is the reaction of the new members on the Republican side in the Senate, three or four of whom have made some of the most persuasive and best prepared speeches of anyone in the Senate about this matter, such as Senator Cook, Matthias, and who was another.

00:09:17 UNKNOWN How about senators Percy and Brooke? And they suggested from...

00:09:17 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Percy and Brooke have two as some, these are men who were only only elected.

- 00:09:22 GEORGE HERMAN But how about their suggestion for an arms moratorium as an alternative?
- 00:09:27 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I think that's excellent too, but I have no doubt that it'll be rejected.
- 00:09:32 UNKNOWN What do you think?
- 00:09:32 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT There been several good suggestions, but...
- 00:09:32 UNKNOWN Rejected...
- 00:09:37 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT By what I mean when the executive, when the president is not interested in them. I didn't know.
- 00:09:37 JOSEPH KRAFT So do you really think that's a good suggestion, the idea for a freeze? What do you think the Russian replied to that would be?
- 00:09:47 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I'm, I'm assuming if the Russians would do it. I mean, the idea of a freeze by both parties is an excellent one.
- 00:09:52 UNKNOWN No, wait a minute.
- 00:09:52 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, of course, why I'm not suggesting a unilateral freeze if we do it and the Russians not do it.
- 00:09:57 JOSEPH KRAFT But what do you think their reaction would be? I mean, you've thought about this and you know something about that government and it's suspicions.
- 00:10:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I, I, uh, that's a very involved question. I, uh, I think at the moment in view of the speech by Mr, what was it? (inaudible) can't remember.
- 00:10:12 UNKNOWN (inaudible).
- 00:10:12 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT (inaudible). I think the prospects are not very good, but I, we've been pursuing a policy for the last, uh, seven or eight years, is not designed to create an a climate in which they would take seriously any such proposal. Uh, I I don't know how to deal with this kind of question. Standing alone and assuming it would, would be received. Of course, it's a good idea. I agree with you. There isn't the slightest chance, I don't think that either this government would propose it or that they would accept it, if that's what you mean.
- 00:10:42 JOSEPH KRAFT Well, then why talk about it? Why draw It out?
- 00:10:42 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I didn't raise the matter.
- 00:10:47 JOSEPH KRAFT You said it was a good idea, Senator.
- 00:10:47 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, he asked me about it.
- 00:10:47 JOSEPH KRAFT You said it was a good idea.
- 00:10:47 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT It is a good idea.

- 00:10:47 UNKNOWN But isn't it just a talking...
- 00:10:52 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT ..Quite impractical and not at all likely to be adopted?
- 00:10:57 UNKNOWN Well, isn't it even negative?
- 00:10:57 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I don't, I don't control the questions that are asked.
- 00:10:57 UNKNOWN Senator...
- 00:10:57 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Why don't you ask questions that have some relevance to the present situation.
- 00:11:02 DAN RATHER Well, Senator, in an effort to do that, you raised, uh, the point of this speech of general, uh, (inaudible) and the Soviet Union. What, what is your best estimate of what's going on in the Soviet Union at the moment?
- 00:11:12 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT At least last...
- 00:11:12 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Goes on here much.
- 00:11:12 UNKNOWN Well, haven't they appeared more militaristic over the last two or three years, though the entry into Czechoslovak?
- 00:11:17 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT We have it course it's very bad for, for an elected official to ever make comparisons between us, because obviously everyone knows we are good people. We law, we're peace loving. We've always, we've never fought a war that wasn't justified. So that's to be understood. But I would say that his speech is not unlike for, are much more provocative than Admiral McCain's article in the February Reader's Digest, which was cleared and approved by both the Pentagon and the State Department. If you, are you familiar with that article? Yes, I am a very provocative article under the circumstances. I think I, if you wanted to, you could find similar speeches when you have the Secretary of Defense in public session saying that Russians are going for a first strike capability without any doubt. I believe he added, or you can't doubt that, or something which is in effect accusing them of, uh, bad faith. And they're nearly everything they've been saying that, and that they are, they are determined to destroy us out and out. You get all these statements, uh, that if you want to look at 'em that way, but it's very unhealthy for an elected official to make comparisons between his own country and, and any country that is in such a situation.
- 00:12:37 DAN RATHER No, but com compared with their own position of say, three to five years ago. You don't think there's any reason to think they're more militaristic now than they I do. I think under Mr. Khrushchev, they were sincerely. He was at least trying to develop the idea of coexistence. I don't think we encouraged him very much, and we, we proceeded in the war in Vietnam. We, we intervened and so on. And I, but I, this is very, uh, distasteful to have to recall these things to you. I mean, you know, it, and we, uh, and from their point of view, waging the war in Vietnam was, uh, something less than conciliatory and in an effort to, to, to come to some agreement in the politic of a political nature.
- 00:13:17 JOSEPH KRAFT Senator, is it your impression that the leadership situation in the Soviet Union is kind of dicey and particularly that it's important for that reason to enter soon into negotiations on IBM?
- 00:13:32 UNKNOWN Oh, I don't know, I, I think the, i I, I think that the leadership there is, is a very difficult matter. It's not to my way of thinking, not nearly as satisfactory as it was under, under Mr. Khrushchev, and I don't know what's going to evolve. The military seems to be becoming more and more powerful. This speech that we mentioned, Mr. (inaudible), Marshall Greco going into Czechoslovakian, apparently making the settlement rather than a political person doing it is very ominous. I mean, it, it seems to me the military is becoming more and more powerful. I hope they don't take over because regardless of who the civilians are, I think we have a better chance of reaching some, some kind of, uh, sort of live and let live agreement.

00:14:12 GEORGE HERMAN I don't you see some sort of opposite trend in the United States at the moment where the military seems to be less and less in favor, both with the holders of the purse strings on Capitol Hill and with the American people.

00:14:22 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, what I mentioned a moment ago, the first break I've seen was, was an outgrowth of this, of this ABM controversy and the, the Symington committee's inquiries, uh, which have received rather favor, been rather favorably received, and his, he's going to, I think, have some very good, good meetings.

00:14:42 GEORGE HERMAN Do you think that's...

00:14:42 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Actually added to the Senate is encouraging.

00:14:47 GEORGE HERMAN I don't, I don't mean to question your influence and your power, but do you believe that's actually an outgrowth of the Senate hearings, or do you believe it's a disenchantment with the war in Vietnam?

00:14:52 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I, I don't think I ought to make such a judgment if the way you put it, I mean, I'm not trying to toot my own horn or...

00:14:57 GEORGE HERMAN No, I, I meant it as a joke, sir.

00:15:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT You gentlemen, to make those judgements.

00:15:02 UNKNOWN Well, don't you think that there is...

00:15:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I do say the first hearings of any consequence on ABM were Senator Gore's hearings.

00:15:07 UNKNOWN Yes.

00:15:07 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT And Senator Simon's hearings on this military business, and it was Senator Simon who brought out the, the Spanish basis thing, which the Spanish basis matter is may very significant in this same sense that ABM is.

00:15:22 GEORGE HERMAN All I'm saying, sir, is that, do you not feel in the country now because of the Vietnam War, an increasing trend to disbelieve and to look cynically at whatever the military says or asks?

00:15:32 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Oh, I think they can't 'cause Vietnam war is a major thing over the long period. I mean, the country is gradually becoming quite disillusioned with it, as they should have been long ago. But for very persuasive...

00:15:42 GEORGE HERMAN Senator, do you see, uh...

00:15:42 JOSEPH KRAFT Sorry, let's talk about Vietnam per se. Uh, do you see any difference between the policy being followed by the Nixon administration and that being followed that was followed by the Johnson administration?

00:15:52 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT There's a difference in the rhetoric. They say different things. I see no difference in the actual, uh, occurrences. I just heard on the radio, two large, very large munition dumps exploded at Danang last night from sparks from a garbage fire. This is a typical occurrence that has been taking place, meaning we have very large efforts there and the, the orders to the troops in the field to continue the, the search and destroy at, at, at, at no less level than before. In fact, after the, the, uh, meeting after the ceasefire last fall, uh, not ceasefire stopping of the bombing in the north, uh, the s the the evidence which we got from the pinnacle and my committee did show there was an increase in the number of battalion sized missions, and there has been no, no, uh, deemphasizing of the vigor of the, of the fight on our part.

00:16:52 DAN RATHER Senator, do you see any opportunity for a unilateral withdrawal of American troops this year? Let, let me state that another way. Do you think the Nixon administration will, uh, have a unilateral withdrawal of any US troops this year?

00:17:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, this is what I meant by the rhetoric. Yes, they say this, I mean, it, it's, it's hinted at every day. There's stories about it. There's stories, there's long stories in this morning's paper about it. I can't tell you there's any truth. I've talked to the president, he hasn't told me that nor Mr. Kissinger that he's going to do it. It is a possible, uh, way, but it is, uh, whether or not it'll, it'll work, especially if it is done with a view and with a feeling and assurance that we are going to (inaudible) that the South present South Vietnamese government will be assured of sufficient weapons and strength in every respect to maintain its control. This in a sense, is, is the creation of a kind of a puppet government. I doubt that that will, will bring a solution to the matter.

00:17:47 DAN RATHER How about secret talks? Uh, has the president or anyone at the White House indicated to you that secret talks are underway?

00:17:57 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, he's, he's done that publicly as well, isn't he? But he hasn't told me what they're saying.

00:18:02 GEORGE HERMAN You divided the, the actions and the attitude of the administration did two parts. Rhetoric and action. Does rhetoric include the peace talk, or does is rhetoric totally meaningless, is in other words...

00:18:12 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT No, I it isn't totally meaningless.

00:18:12 GEORGE HERMAN It could create some atmosphere.

00:18:17 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT It could reflect their real intentions. Who knows. But in this area, we all know and expect that there is, that people aren't entirely frank. What, what was the famous man who was this public relation with the Pentagon who said, you know, the national interest sometimes justifies something less than the truth, Arthur Sylvester. Mr. Sylvester...

00:18:37 GEORGE HERMAN But, uh, is it your feeling when you say there's no, there is a difference only in rhetoric. There's no difference in the action that this constitutes really no difference?

00:18:42 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT No, it is a difference. And I didn't say it was without significance, but I haven't noticed any real change in the substantive actions or substantive position with regard to, to what we expect as a, as terms of settlement. In other words, there's no genuine return to the principles of 54 at Geneva in which there we were, not we, but the, the people at Geneva accepted the principle that there would be a completely free, uh, election for the people to determine their own future. What is happening would appear to be that we are hoping to guarantee that Q and Q will continue and control the South Vietnam. But I don't know. I mean, I don't know what they have really in mind.

00:19:32 JOSEPH KRAFT You would agree, Senator, wouldn't you, that there's been some evolution in the position of the Saigon government that they have now agreed to talk and to meet with the Liberation Fund?

- 00:19:42 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I don't think that's a no, that's a different matter. I wasn't talking of there rhetoric. I don't think that's very significant.
- 00:19:47 JOSEPH KRAFT You don't...
- 00:19:47 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I don't think the (inaudible) government for a moment wishes anything to happen. I think they hope we'll stay right in there and keep pitching just as we have, and that they will not, are not really interested, certainly in a political settlement.
- 00:19:57 JOSEPH KRAFT Would you be in favor of, of early, uh, large scale unilateral American withdrawals from Vietnam?
- 00:20:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I, I really, I said on numerous occasions is I think we ought to do this for the conference. I doubt very taken by this unilateral action as a, as a dignified and intelligent way, and even a traditional way of settling these matters is we, what I do think is that perhaps our objective in the long run should be changed, which is to accept, as I say, and do things which would give credibility to the idea that we are perfectly content for South Vietnam. The people of that country win a free election to determine their, the kind of government that they live under. Rather than that we are doing everything we can to ensure the continuation of the Q government.
- 00:20:42 UNKNOWN Senator uh...
- 00:20:47 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT These are very different things in my view.
- 00:20:47 DAN RATHER Do you see, um, as part of the North Koreans motive for capturing the pueblo for these probes, uh, against the South Koreans and the shooting down of our aircraft, do you see as part of their motive trying to take pressure off the North Vietnamese?
- 00:21:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Oh, it could be, but it's a kind of a rogue nation, which I think rather glorious in tweaking the nose of Uncle Sam and so on. These are these sporadic things. Could be, it is certainly consistent with that. Whether that's a major motive, I, I don't know. And I'd rather doubt it. I think they probably do it anyway. They, they like this kind of thing. I think they gimme that impression.
- 00:21:22 GEORGE HERMAN Senator, what about, uh, the Nixon administration's overall foreign policy philosophy? They've been in, in government now, an appreciable time. Their, their, their techniques and their ideas are beginning to show and become established. How do you evaluate it?
- 00:21:37 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT Well, I, uh, it's too early to evaluate it broadly. I, I can say specifically that what they've been saying about some of these things is good. As I said a moment ago, I, I did think and still think that the decision, and it came as a great disappointment to me. After a considerable delay, he approved the Don Liberation Treaty. Immediately the committee moved and the Senate acted in a very convincing way in my view. And the very next day, we were called to the White House, and this decision was made, which to me is quite contradictory of Article six. Now, that may be a small thing, but it, to me, it's a kind of a, an an attitude one has toward these things. And this was a disappointment that they don't really believe that this, the idea that you can negotiate with these people, the, the communist that is not negotiable, that this is a, this is a conflict that must go on and it sooner or later they'll give up. These, these are, this is disappointing to me.
- 00:22:32 UNKNOWN Senator one...
- 00:22:37 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT That's a very small thing. I wouldn't wanna draw a conclusion as to the policy. Generally. I, I have great respect for both of the President and Mr. Kissinger, and they're very serious people and they've treated me with, with great consideration. I don't have any real courage complain at this early date. I just hope as a senator and as with a certain feeling of responsibility that I'd like to move this country out of this intervention abroad and, and, uh, so on and pay attention to what here at home. We have some very serious problems here at home in my own state, and I happen to have about two or 300 people from Arkansas here today, the Chamber of Commerce. And I'm very conscious of the needs here at home. And I don't think this is good for the country. I think it's bad. It's keeping alive. The, the worst things that are going on here. I'm sure in my own mind that Vietnam is probably the principle. Cause in the background of the student riots, and nothing distress me more than what's happening to our younger generation. I get an awful lot of letters. I've had several this week from both students who are here and I've had 'em from people, young men, and you obviously see from their letters, the most sensitive class of our young men who have left this country. There've been a lot of them, you know, I think some 50,000 have immigrated from this country to other countries because of their disillusionment with what our, their country's doing. And they're among the best. I had a most impressive letter from a man one of the college the other day, making this point in a way I can't possibly make here is to the, the best people, the most sensitive intelligent students are the ones who are, are most alienated. The, the, the sort of the, the raw material for the brown shirts are staying in there, you know, and they're not leaving. They like it and they're going to stay and they'll, and they may set a tone for the next generation.

00:24:22 GEORGE HERMAN Is is Vietnam really the whole determining cause?

00:24:27 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT It's the major cause that started this. Now there are many other things. It's like anything else that gets abroad. It's the, it's the inspiration for it. There are many other shortcomings which in themselves, uh, I think are shortcomings, but would not have inspired this kind of resentment and, and, and turmoil. We have it in other countries. You, you, you have it in, in nearly every other country, of course become fashionable now.

00:24:52 DAN RATHER Senator, in, in the time remaining, uh, may I ask you very quickly, uh, in what direction do you see your committee going? There's been some talk, for example, that you want to get into chemical and bi, uh, biological warfare investigations.

00:25:02 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I, I, I don't want to get into it in that sense. It's part of this show. I mean the, the, the existence in, in all this debate about ABM and this numbers game that Mr. Lad says, we are there. The Russians are going to have 2,500 missiles by 1972. This, to me, is utterly, but it's a kind of a madness because he, he, we've never brought in and he hasn't this extraordinary capacity to do destruction. It already exists in the chemical and biological warfare. If you add that to all these missiles, just talk about it. Weighing these precisely just how many there'll be is kind of nonsense. It's, it's irrelevant. There's such an enormous and unlimited capacity of destruction that it, it makes no sense to argue about this and that number of missiles, obviously both countries have the power to just literally destroy the other by either means I think the biological and chemical could be even worse than the other.

00:25:57 UNKNOWN Will you be doing some hearings in that line?

00:25:57 SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT I hope so. I'm, I'm having a man down who's a, considered a very great expert in the field, uh, right away this week for my personal consultation, looking toward having some, because I think why, why ignore this aspect of it if it's added to the, to the missile business?

00:26:12 GEORGE HERMAN Thank you very much, Senator Fulbright. It's been most interesting listening to you. Thank you for being here with us today to face the nation. We'll have a work in about next week's guest in a moment.
